“Cities are where the climate battle will largely be won or lost” - UN Secretary-General António Guterres Cities are global economic drivers, centres of culture and commerce, and where the majority of the world’s population resides. However, these urban areas account for more than 70% of global GHG emissions and energy consumption. They are some of the most acutely vulnerable areas to the impacts of climate change from rising sea levels, increasing mean temperatures, or changes in precipitation patterns and storm severity.

At 2150, our objective is to find the game-changers and sustainable investments that will enable a future where technology and innovation can reverse the negative impacts on the planet coming from cities and promote sustainability and prosperity. We achieve this by deploying Constructive Capital that targets companies with the potential to benefit billions of people, create billions in commercial value and low gigatonnes of emissions at scale.

Impact and sustainability is at the heart of 2150’s mission, informing how we invest, our interactions with companies and investors, and the ultimate ethos of our fund. As an organisation, we rely on internal expertise and capacities to evaluate impact and promote sustainable outcomes in our portfolio companies and investor network.

Job Description

2150 is seeking an Analyst to help our investment team identify and analyse investment opportunities, support the scaling of our portfolio companies and contribute to our research into potential sectors for investment. The role has a two year term.

The role

- Identify and evaluate potential investments in innovative startups and new technologies.
- Assist across all stages of deal execution from sourcing new deals, commercial, financial and technical diligence, preparation investment memos and transaction workflow.
- Use financial models and market research to assess the viability and growth potential of companies.
- Work with portfolio companies to help drive their success and identify new investment opportunities.
- Build relationships with entrepreneurs and other industry professionals.
- Contribute to deep dives into various research topics (e.g. carbon markets, industrial heat, grid orchestration, critical metals and much more!).

What We Expect

The ideal candidate combines relevant experience of 1-2 years in an Analyst role in a venture fund, private equity fund, investment bank or management consultancy with a mission alignment to use technology to make our planet more efficient, resilient and sustainable. Specifically the ideal candidate is:

- Intellectually curious: Always seeking to learn, understand and share new knowledge with other team members, ecosystem partners and portfolio companies.
- Data-driven and rigorous: Data-driven decisions and ability to consolidate vast amounts of information into succinct and actionable insights.
- Entrepreneurial mindset: Comfortable with the evolving nature of a growing organization and willing to take initiative to constantly improve the team, benefit our investments and help us all become better in service of o ecosystem and portfolio.
- Independent but collaborative: Able to work independently but aware of the need to be inclusive and collaborative with the broader team.
- Analytically proven: At least 1-2 years experience in an investment organization or consulting firm.
- Mission alignment: The 2150 team works hard, but we do so because we believe in the potential and critical impact of the technologies that we back and we are, as a team, fully aligned around the mission at hand.
- Flexibility: You have the versatility to work with the team on a number of core problems and don’t mind taking on any task at a high pace. You can manage priorities, take initiative and work on multiple projects at once.
- Right to work in the UK: We are unable to offer placement visas for this role.

Commitment to Diversity

A sustainable community is one that has a place for everyone, and 2150 is excited to have applications from all aspects of society. We believe that a team with diverse backgrounds and beliefs will make our fund even stronger.
